TALKS

Why Reading Matters in Research?

- Reading Smart, Research Strong
- Just like you wouldn't build a house on weak ground, you don't want to base your thesis on random sources

18

TALKSWhy Reading Matters in Research?

- To find great ideas
- To ensure valid methods
- To write convincing arguments
- To think critically

27

Not All Sources Are Equal — Choose Wisely!

- “Just like you wouldn’t buy random products at a grocery store, don’t read random articles either.”

28

How to Spot a Trustworthy Source?

- Credible Author: Look for experts, researchers, or university-affiliated authors.
- Publication Type: Prefer journals, books, conference proceedings.
- Recent Year: For fast-evolving fields, stick to the last 5 years.
- Reputable Publisher: Like Springer, Elsevier, IEEE, Wiley, Emerald, ACM, Taylor & Francis.

29

Trusted Types of Sources

- Peer-reviewed journals
- Academic books from top publishers
- Conference papers from IEEE/ACM
- Theses/dissertations from university libraries
- Official research reports (e.g., WHO, UNESCO)

30

TALKSWhere to Find Them?

- Google Scholar – Easy and effective
- ScienceDirect, SpringerLink, IEEE Xplore – Publisher databases
- University repositories – Theses and local research

31

TALKSPro Tip — How to Search Smart

- Use specific keywords:
- “game-based learning motivation site:sciencedirect.com”
- Filter by year, author, journal
- Check citation count
- Skim the abstract first, don’t read full text blindly

32

TALKS

“So before you go deep with any technique—first make sure what you’re reading is worth it.
